ADJOURNMENT ON APRIL 22.

THE ASSEMBLY FIXES THAT DATE TO HURRY UP THINGS.

Grab Hills May New Be Expected to Be Reported, as the Lobby Has Recome Active-The Niagara Power Company Grab Bill the First to Come Out.

ALBANY, April 6.-Although the Assembly adopted a resolution fixing the date for final adjournment for Saturday, April 22, that by no means is the day on which adjournment will be had. The resolution was sent to the Senate and referred to the Finance Committee, and it is believed that it will be amended to provide for adjournment on April 28. One reason expressed for introducing it to-day was "to hurry the fellows up." This means that the leaders want the members to get their legislation out of committees, and the first indication of the hurrying up process came when the Assembly Committee on Electricity, Gas and Water Supply to-day reported Assemblyman Leggett's Niagara Power Company grab bill.

The closing days of the session are bound to witness a lively hustle to get out the grabs and to get into the good graces of those who have such measures in charge. All of these matters have been held up pending the disposition of the Odell-Higgins indirect tax bills, for it was understood the members could get nothing in the way of personal legislation until these bills were out of the way. Grab bills that have been slumbering in the committee until the tax bills were passed can now be expected to make their appearance in great numbers, for the lobby has become active and the Black Horse Cavalry is prepared to do its annual business.

Majority Leader Rogers says that as far as the actual business to be disposed of is concerned, the Legislature could adjourn on April 22 without any trouble. He says the Hooker inquiry may have an effect upon the date. The Assembly Judiciory Committee has until April 19 in which to make its report. It is not believed. it can have it ready before that time.

The committee which is investigating the New York city lighting affairs will undoubtedly be ready to make its report in another week.

Had not the Legislature to-day passed the bill reappropriating $10,000,000 as the first installment for the $101,000,000 barge canal improvement, it would have lapsed. It was discovered that the appropriation would lapse unless the Governor signed the bill to-morrow. Consequently, when the bill was reported in the Assembly this morning Majority Leader Rogers asked unanimous consent that it be advanced to a third reading and passed. Assemblyman Tompkins (Tam.) objected, but reconsidered, and the bill passed the lower House. It was then burried over to the Senate and passed that body. The Governor will sign the bill at once.

Although there are many bills in the Legislature providing for increases in salaries of New York city employees, the Assembly to-day advanced to a third reading Assemblyman La Fetra's bill which makes inoperative any of these bills. It gives the New York city Board of Estimate and Apportionment absolute power to classify and fix salaries of all employees and officials.

The project of Henry Phipps, the Pittsburg millionaire, to give the working people of New York city more comfortable and sanitary homes is to be incorporated into a society known as "The Phipps Houses." Assemblyman Prentice last Friday introduced a bill authorizing the incorporation that Although there are many bills in the his services. The Senate advanced to a third read-The Senate advanced to a third read-ing Senator Good sell's bill authorizing the New York Central railroad to straighten its tracks at Spuyten Duyvil. His bills in the interests of the Belmont syndicate were also advanced to a third reading. One authorizes the abandonment of un-profitable routes in The Bronx, and the other will provide a connection of Mr. Belmont's roads in Queens county with a tunnel under the East River, to be constructed under the old Steinway franchise to Forty-second street instead of Thirty-fourth street. Senator Cooper's New York City Teachers Retirement Fund bill passed the Senate, as also did Assemblyman Stanley's giving the American Museum of Natural History in New York an additional $40,000 a year.

The three Corrupt Practices bills, designed to bring about more wholesome elections and make the use of money a dangerous practice at elections, and which were prepared by Judge D-Cady Herrick, were advanced to a third reading in the Senate to-day. The understanding is that they will be discussed when called up for final passage. nssage. In the Senate to-day Assemblyman J. T.

In the Senate to-day Assemblyman J. T. Smith's bill standardizing the municipal and railroad bonds in which savings banks may invest was reported favorably. The Senate Banks Committee amended the fill so as to permit savings banks to invest in the bonds of the Chicago and Eastern Il inois Railway Company, which is said to be a constituent part of the Rock Island

Assemblyman Fitzsimmons introduced a bill making it a felony for any one to sell a fill making it a leady for any one of sent or to give away any compound or preparation composed in whole or in part of any unwholesome, deleterious or poisonous substitute for pure and wholesome liquor. The punishment for a violation is to be a fine not exceeding $2,500 or imprisonment of not more than ten years, or both fine and imprisonment.

The Assembly Ways and Means Committee reported an appropriation of $150,000 from the State Treasury to establish an insane reception hospital in New York This hospital is to cost $300,000, and alance of the money is to be appropriated next year.

It is to be used as a sort of detention hospital for people thought to be insane, and they are to undergo a course of expert supervision and examination before being admitted to a regular State hos-pital for the insane.

Assemblyman Agnew's State Water Com-mission bill, favored by Gov. Higgins, was ordered to a third reading in the Assem-

Mayor McClellan's water bill and the other bills affecting New York city water supply were made a special order on final passage in the Assembly for next Tuesday, at which time the Agnes bill will relieve passage in the Assembly for next fuesday, at which time the Agnew bill will also come up for final passage.

The Senate Insurance Committee has reported favorably Senator Ambler's bill which prohibits agreements between fire insurance companies to fix premium rates.

JUSTICE HOOKER'S DEFENCE.

ATTEMPT TO JUSTIFY ONE OF HIS APPOINTMENTS.

His Counsel Plead That It Was the Custom of Congressmen to Evade the Civil Service Laws-Fredonia Letter Carrier Gets Three Months' Unearned Pay.

ALBANY, April 6.-Efforts were made to-day by the attorneys of Supreme Court Justice Warren B. Hooker to show to the Assembly Judiciary Committee, which is investigating the charges against him, that it was the custom of Congressmen to evade the Civil Service laws. This is to justify the appointment of Katherine Clark of Fredonia to the Fort Plain post Clark of Fredonia to the Fort Plain post office and her subsequent transfer to the Fredonia post office. She was appointed by Congressman James Sherman, one of the Tapeworm Club, at the request of Justice Hooker after he had been appointed a Supreme Court Justice by Gov. Black. Congressman George N. Southwick of Albany, another member of the Odell Tapeworm Club, gave interesting testimony on this point. He was called to tell about Justice Hooker being in Washington after he had been appointed to the bench. Mr. Southwick was cross-examined by John B. Stanchfield. He said that it was oustom-B. Stanchfield. He said that it was customary, when an appointment was to be made to a post office which was to be placed in the classified service, for one Congressman to recommend the appointment of a person desired by a colleague. After sixty days the appointee would be transferred to the other Congressman's district, thus evading civil service requirements. Mr. Southwick seemed to regard the proceeding not as wrong, but as merely a Congressional courtesy. He said that both Democrate and Republicans had done this.

Attorney Carr read several letters from the National Civil Service Commission in which it was stated that such appointments and transfers had been made. B. Stanchfield. He said that it was custom-which it was stated that such appointments and transfers had been made.

Edward Easton, a clerk in the Fredonia post office, testified that he made up the payrolls and signed them from March, 1899. When he signed them the names of Frank P. Ball and Maurice Hooker were not on the roll. These names, he said, were inserted afterward. This was brought out serted afterward. This was brought out by Deputy Attorney-General Coman to show that there was concealment of their connection with the Fredonia post office. Mr. Stanchfield made an effort to have this testimony stricken out on the ground that it did not connect Justice Hooker with the matter. Mr. Coman submitted that the evidence was material if it was to be shown that Justice Hooker had con-spired with Postmaster Taylor to defraud the Government.

S. Ray Fairbanks, one of the first letter carriers at Fredonia, testified that they be-gan to carry the mail there on April 17, 1899. he mail boxes did not arrive until April 12. The mail boxes did not arrive until April 12. This testimony was put in to show that O'Neil, the clerk and carrier appointed for Justice Hooker, who was paid for January, February and March of that year, was paid for doing no work, as it is admitted that his first work was done in connection with the placing of the letter boxes in Fredonia. County Clerk J. D. Gallop of Chautauqua.

was sworn to identify the original judgment roll in the Wirtner case, which was offered in evidence. This was the judgment secured by Hooker and Stearns from Supreme Court Justice White of Buffalo, to enjoin the city of Dunkirk from building on the own property adjoining the building on its own property adjoining the Hooker-Stearns post office building there. Justice White has testified that when he learned all the facts and the irregularity f the whole proceeding he had his own adgment vacated. Mr. Coman read from the report of the Bar Association investigation the testi-mony given by Maurice Hooker showing that he had received notice of his appointment from Postmaster Taylor and his uncle. Justice Hooker, in the latter's law office. He had never seen Mr. Taylor up to that time. Yesterday Taylor, while on the wit-Hees stand, swore that he had known young Hooker since he was a mere boy. This closed the case against Hooker. Mr. Stanchfield renewed his motion made previously, to strike out the testimony of the witness Easton relative to his signing the payrolls at a time when the names of Frank P. Ball and Maurice Hooker were not upon them. He also wanted the testimony of Ora Caldwell, given some two weeks ago, eliminated. Chairman Fish ruled that the ommittee could not strike out until assured hat all the testimony was in. Mr. Stanchfield then asked for a week's stay, that the attorneys for Justice Hooker might determine whether or not to submit any evidence in rebuttal. The committee decided to grant this request, with the understanding that the entire case should be closed up on Thurs-day or Priday of next week. The committee then adjourned until next Wednesday at

DETECTIVE SERGEANT SUGDEN SUSPENDED BY MR. M'ADOO.

Head of Devery's Transfer Bureau to Be Tried on Charges of Gross Insubor-dination—O'Brien's Admissions as to Sleuths Started Him Talking.

There were pleasing rumors around Lyons's restaurant on the Bowery and various Broadway corners yesterday that there was to be a strike of Central Office detectives because of the admissions made to the Legislature at Albany by Inspector Stephen O'Brien. The head sleuth made Stephen O'Brien. The head sleuth made the wonderful assertion, in supporting the Committee of Nine's police bill, that some detectives were in the habit of dividing booty with thieves.

It may be set down here, once for all, that there will be no strike. The strike is apt to go the way of the petition which certain detective sergeants, whose feelings had been outraged by remarks of District Attorney Jerome, prepared, asking Mr. McAdoo to defend them from the slanderous attacks of the District Attorney. The petition was suppressed by some of the more acute minded men of the Detective Bureau who didn't want to see the bureau vindicated, at least by such an inquiry as Mr. Jerome would have demanded.

r. Jerome would have demanded. The "strike" talk came for the most part from the hartenders and men of leisure along the more frequented highways where Mr. O'Brien's men'd highways where through the days and evenings disguised as theatre district loafers and admirers of female beauty. There was only one detective who was doing any talking. He was Detective Sergeant Sugden, who detective who was doing any talking. He was Detective Sergeant Sugden, who used to look after Mr. Devery's transfer bureau when policemen regarded the matter of being transferred as about the most important to their pocketbooks that there was in all police business.

Sugden thought that the occasion was a proper one for making a display of injured virtue. He gave an interview to a newspaper, in which he said that Mr. McAdoo was a political puppet and had no will of his own and no mind of his own in dealing his own and no mind of his own in dealing with police conditions. Sugden, who is now attached to the Madison street station with the special duty of looking after fire escapes, went on duty yesterday apparently with the idea that he was the leader of a revolt in the cause of virtue unjustly spurned, but he got very little open encouragement; he turned around once or twice, on leaving groups of policemen with whom he had been talking, as though he thought he heard laughter behind his back. Not very long after Sugden reached his post he was summoned to Police Headquarters. In the course of his newspaper interview Sugden had quoted Inspector Cortright as saying that he was sick of the department under present conditions. Sugden, followed by a chorus of approving growls and encouraging grins from his revolt in the cause of virtue unjustly growls and encouraging grins from his colleagues around the halls of 300 Mul-berry street, went to Inspector Cortright's office as soon as he reached the building. When he came out he said that he and Cortunderstood each other. Mr. Cortright came out soon afterward and said that Sugden had never had any such conthat Sugden had never had any such conversation with him as Sugden had pretended to quote.

Sugden then went to Commissioner McAdoo's office. When he came out he said that he had been informed that if he answered any questions his answers might be used against him, so that he had refused to the with the Commissioner. be used against him, so that he had refused to talk with the Commissioner. Mr. McAdoo had nothing to say of the visit. He did not care to be put in the position of having a controversy with a subordinate about police discipline. Sugden said he wanted to see O'Brien name the crooked detectives and prosecute them. Sugden said this with the fine air of one who is conscious that there are no goods to be found on himself.

Charges have been formulated against Charges have been formulated against Sugden for gross insubordination and conduct unbecoming a member of the police force, in that he engaged in a public discussion on a subject affecting the department regarding which there is public controversy and difference of opinion.

Sugden went back to the Madison street station after leaving Headquarters and said that he had been suspended pending a trial. He locked up his uniform and went away from the station laughing.

Inspector O'Brien, who renewed the storm

Inspector O'Brien, who renewed the storm which had been almost quieted after Mr. Jerome's accusations were allowed to drop, was himself busy explaining yesterday. He said that the official records at Albany would show what he really said was that some detectives probably profited by their understandings with thieves. He believed that the great majority of detectives were honest, especially his own men. He did not ask for any transfers of men whom he suspected of being in league with thieves yesterday—nor has he since his Albany

HIS FORTUNE IN RUGS GONE. Expert Says Hadii Hassanoffi Has Lost a Quarter of a Million in America.

The case of Frederick Comp of Rutherford, who was bookkeeper for the bankrupt firm of Sajun & Telehram and who is accused of stealing valuable regs from Hadji Hassanoff of 66f Eagle avenue, The Hadji Hassanoff of 661 Eagle avenue, The Bronx, had a second hearing in Jefferson Market police court yesterday. Lawyer Abbott spoke for Hassanoff.

"After the complainant intrusted his rugs to the firm," said he, "Sajun's brother took him off to Atlantic City. He told him the climate of New York was bad for his health. When Hassanoff got back he couldn't find the firm or the rugs."

"Sajun & Telebram gave $10,000 to Hassanoff," declared Comp's attorney, "and a bill of sale was made out. The firm owed Mrs. Woods, Comp's mother-in-law, $2.000 and she took some of the rugs as security. Comp was only trying to sell the rugs for his mother-in-law when he was arrested."

Lawyer Abbott denied that Hassanoff had received any money for the rugs.

Lawyer Abbott denied that Hassanoff had received any money for the rugs.

"I understand," said Magistrate Barlow, "that an inquiry is being made into another part of this same affair in the District Attorney's office. I will adjourn the case to Saturday morning, and you can put everything in the hands of the District Attorney at once."

The prisoner is out on bail furnished by his mother-in-law. D. M. Bedikian, a rug expert of 11 West Twenty-eighth street, who was in court, said that there was no doubt as to the age and value of the rugs. He said that Hassanoff had been a great man in the East and had done so well sending his rugs to America that he thought he would bring his whole collection here and realize a fortune. This he did three years ago. Unscrupulous dealers in Boston and realize a fortune. In the territory ears ago. Unscrupulous dealers in Boston and New York, Bedekian said, took advantage of the old man's ignorance of English and have fleeced him out of everything. After Day of Homeless Wandering. While the circus crowd was streaming into Madison Square Garden last night a woman carrying a baby and leading a little boy stood at the Madison avenue entrance for an hour. She didn't speak to anybody, but Policeman Walsh thought her actions queer. Just as he started to speak to her she fainted on the sidewalk and lay there while the baby cried and walsh called the patrol wagon and took the woman and the children to the Tender-loin station. Sergt. Robinson, on duty at the deak, diagnosed the woman's trouble quickly.

"She's half starved," said he. "One of you men hustle out and buy a lot of hot milk, hot soup and things."

He called an ambulance from the New York Ho:pital. The woman revived enough to tell something of her story. She had for dress a single garment. Her shoes for dress a single garment. Her shoes were soleless and full of holes. Her girl baby, six months old, was wrapped in an old coffee sack. The little boy, sixteen months old, was dressed grotesquely in garments that had been worn by a grown

Her name, she said, was Mrs. Annie Her name, she said, was Mrs. Annie Fitzgerald, and her children were Ellen and Frank. She wouldn't tell the ser-geant where she had lived, but she said that with her husband she was dispossessed last Wednesday. The only place she could find to sleep Wednesday night was a vacant lot on East Twenty-third street. She said she put her children in barrels and covered them the best she could, then she slept behind the barrels herself. Since Wednesday she wandered the streets, she said, not begging from anybody, but getting a few cents here and there from people who were struck by the misery in ber face.

The baby was pretty sick, but the hot milk revived it and it cried lustily. The three were taken to Bellevue Hospital to be cared for until the husband can be found and the charitable societies investigate the story.
